THREE DECADES OF INNOVATION & QUALITY

Photopolymer

Description

Stampera flexible photopolymer is essentially a Methacryl-Urethane Photosensitive resin. The resins polymerise when exposed to ultraviolet source of light energy. The polymerisation process occurring in plate making equipment converts liquid resin into elastomer plate. These plates are used for making rubber stamps and making polymer plate for printing on corrugated box, label, envelope etc.

Common Description & Advantages of Stampera Resins

- Stampera photopolymer resins are photosensitive polyurethane elastomers in the form of a colored viscous liquid. This liquid polymerizes when exposed to an ultraviolet (UV-A) light source having spectrum range between 315 and 380 nanometers.
- Water washable, no need for organic solvents during the process.
- Resins are non-toxic, non-corrosive and non-harmful monomers.
- Environmental friendly.

General Instructions

- Store the polymer in a closed container at a temperature between 2°C and 28°C.
- When producing stamps, wear protective clothing, gloves and UV resistant safety glasses.
- Do not expose the liquid photopolymer to the direct sunlight.

Advantage

The biggest advantage of making printing plate for corrugation from Liquid Photopolymer is COST. The per Sq. Mt. cost of plate making from Liquid Polymer is substantially lower than conventional sheet polymer. Besides that, liquid polymer system is environmentally friendly since no hazardous organic chemicals are used in washing plate. The plates from Liquid polymer are simply washed by water with small amount of detergent.

Properties of Finished Plates & Rubber Stamps

- Excellent printing quality.
- Good dimensional stability with tack free plates.
- Long life when not exposed to direct sunlight.
- Long working life and long press life.
- Easy mounting on printing presses.
- Compatible with both water reduced inks and oil based inks.
- Extremely economical plate cost.

Safety Information

- All Stampera resins have an LD50 exceeding 5000 mg/kg of body weight. This means that they are non-dangerous products (LD50 is the Lethal Dose which effectively kills 50% of laboratory rats).
- When producing stamps wear protecting clothing, gloves and UV resistant safety glasses.
- Do not expose the liquid photopolymer to the direct sunlight.
